Overview

Perhaps no other country has quite the allure of the United States, a superpower that has successfully promoted the idea of the American Dream. The ethnically and racially diverse country is touted to be a land of immigrants while also being a popular place to work and visit. In fact, the United States is among the top ten most visited countries in the world, behind only Spain and France.

History

The indigenous people of Siberia were the first to arrive to the United States prior to 15,000 BC. A number of cultures formed and dissolved before 1500 and it was after Christopher Columbus’ discovery of sailing routes to the Americas in 1492 that European colonization of the Americas began, and this New World came to be known as the United Colonies of America. By the 1760s, the colonies had over two million residents along the Atlantic coast lying east of the Appalachian Mountains.

On July 4, 1776 the thirteen inhabiting English colonies adopted the Declaration of Independence and on September 9, Congress formally changed the nation’s name to the United States of America.
50 American states

America is a federal republic of 50 states, the federal district of Washington D.C., five major territories and several minor islands.

Male to female ratio

As of July 1, 2018, there were 161.13 million males and 166.04 million females living in the United States. According to 2017 statistics, Alaska had the highest male to female ratio in the country, with 109 men for every 100 women, while the male to female ratio was lowest in the District of Columbia, with 90.2 men for every 100 women.

Visitors statistics

2018 statistics from the National Travel and Tourism Office reveal that the number of international visitors to the United States totalled 79.6 million, with the most number of visitors from Canada, South Korea, Mexico, Brazil, the U.K, Germany, Japan, France, China and India. The most visited states are California, Florida, Nevada, Texas and New York.

In 2017, the United States issued 9,681,913 non-immigrant visas and 559,536 immigrant visas. The different aspects of the visa process are overseen by the State Department and Department of Homeland Security - Customs and Border Protection (CBP) and United States Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS).
The Best Times To Visit America

United States’ geographical diversity and climatic variety makes it a country to visit pretty much any time of the year. Although the peak season for tourism runs from May to September, the east and west coasts look incredibly picturesque in spring and fall.

THE EAST COAST - May and June are particularly pleasant, while July and August get hot and humid, and September-October is full of scenic foliage views. Winters in the northeast can get biting cold although Florida remains sunny and doesn’t really have a winter.

THE MIDWEST - Summer months in Texas, Chicago and the rest of midwest get blazing hot while winters in the upper midwest are freezing cold. Chicago and Minneapolis see sub-zero temperatures while Kentucky and Texas are chilly rather than cold.

THE WEST COAST - The famously pleasant west coast climate gives you something to enjoy throughout the year with the exception of the rainy months of January and February. April-October is a popular time to visit San Francisco, Los Angeles and Lake Tahoe. Yosemite National Park receives the most visitors in May and June although September and October are also great times to enjoy the colorful trees and crisp air minus the crowd.

Meanwhile, Seattle and Portland are beautiful in the summers and the winters higher up on the west coast are moderate. Alaskan winters are freezing cold while August is the most popular time to visit when the stunning landscape comes alive, and the salmon runs, grizzly bears and predatory birds beckon. Las Vegas attracts tourists all through the year while ski enthusiasts plan trips to Colorado in the winter months.

Visitors from all other countries wishing to enter the United States temporarily for the purpose of tourism or business will need the appropriate visitor visa (B) visa.

Issued by the government, an exit visa grants individuals permission to leave a country. Like most countries, the United States does not have an exit visa; Belarus, Qatar, Russia and Saudi Arabia require an exit visa.
